Advertising Is But a Means of Exhilarating Sales, but Fails if Goods Lack Merit.

Notable Advertising Successes Plainly Indicate This.

"I bought it because I saw it advertised." is the statement of thousands of people to-day. We buy advertised goods because we know that to advertise there must be merit behind every claim, or failure results, and real news every day can be found in the advertising columns of this paper or any other paper.

Thousands of people right here in the State of Virginia are benefited almost daily by having read an advertisement, and probably no advertising campaign in the history of the country has met with such success as that of Tanlac. The laboratory production of Tanlac to-day exceeds 4,500,000 bottles, the growth of only a few months. Here is what a Richmond man, Mr. I. B. Parkerson, says about advertising. He says: "I saw Tanlac advertised and, having been a sufferer from Rheumatism and a confounded, disagreeable, ever present, exhausted, worn-out feeling, with sharp-shooting pains in my shoulders and arms, with occasional pains in my legs, plainly Rheumatism, and, on top of all this that worn-out feeling which seemed to be the reason or symptom of lost appetite. Wasn't myself by a long shot, and realized I needed a tonic. I read the ad, bought a bottle, then another, and now I have taken three. The pains are gone, and my appetite has returned. It has helped me, and I believe it a fine tonic and will help others also." lieve it a fine tonic and will help others

Mr. Parkerson resides at 211 East Twelfth Street, and he is one of millions in this country who are reading advertising for profit. There is a message in every advertisement, and as the statements of thousands here in Virginia are published, every day new ones backing up—the statements of those before, it must be apparent to all who read, that Tanlae, the great preparation, really is worthy a trial in cases of stomach, kidney or liver aliments, usually indicated by frequent headaches; sluggish liver, nervousness, constipa-Mr. Parkerson resides at 211 East gish liver, nervousness, constipa-ion, sleeplessness, lost energy and cindred troubles, all arising from diseased or worn-out vital organs upon which the entire human structure must stand or fall, and for which Tanlac, the great, reviviner, stimulant and invigorator, has proven in thousands upon thousands of cases the premier preparation.
